

OVER 1,000 DISPLACED AS ST. VINCENT HOSPITAL CLOSES DOORS

More than 1,000 employees were laid off at the bankrupt St. Vincent's Hospital in Manhattan. A statement released by the hospital said "St. Vincent's Hospital is deeply grateful for their years of dedication and service, especially during these difficult times." A job fair is being held Thursday and Friday for the displaced staff in hopes to find them employment in a timely manner. Lawyer Yetta Kurland is filing a lawsuit against the hospital for shutting down operations before receiving approval from the State Department of Health, a violation of state law. "That is unthinkable, and we need to immediately stop that," said Ms. Kurland.
