MOTOROLA TAPS NEW HR VP

PR Newswire: Motorola has tapped Scott A. Crum as its new senior vice president for Human Resources, for its Mobile Devices and Home division. He comes to the company from IIT Corp. where he had similar duties and has extensive human resource experience with a number of other prominent companies such as Northrop Grumman and General Instrument Corporation. General Instrument Corporation, which manufactures television conversion boxes, was acquired by Motorola back in 2000 and at that time hired Crum. Motorola CEO Sanjay Jha, referring to Motorola's imminent separation into two separate companies, says Crum's experience will be "invaluable" and necessary to "ensure continuity of business support while building and preparing both organizations for future success."
