JOURNAL

The Tri-State Petroleum Corporation has hired David J. Denham to head HR projects for the more than 200 employees. Tri-State Petroleum is a family-owned business that operates convenience stores as well as distributing motor fuels to Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The company was founded in 1974. Denham was the HR director for the City of Wheeling, West Virginia, for seven years before being hired by Tri-State. Additionally, he acted in several HR management positions for American Electric Power Corporation. Colleen C. McGlinn, the CEO of Tri-State, said, "We're excited to welcome David to our team because we're confident in his depth of experience as a top-level human resources director. We recognize that our most important asset is our employees, and we want to ensure that a high-caliber professional is looking out for their needs."
