
GOOGLE'S HEAD OF HUMAN RESOURCES JOINS EVOLV BOARD

Google's global Head of Human Resources, Laslo Bock, has joined the Evolv board of directors. Evolv is a provider of science-based, on demand talent matching and intelligence solutions. They offer award-winning software under a Software-as-a-Service platform. In a press release, Bock said, "Evolv to me is clearly one of the most innovative companies around. The scientific, data-driven and analytical approach that they bring to creating actionable intelligence around talent aligns strongly with my passion for applying analytics to critical human capital decisions. The results that I've seen from Evolv are game changing." During Bock's tenure at Google, he oversaw a growth from 3,000 employees to more than 23,000 thousand across the world. Google was also named the Best Company to Work for in America by Fortune magazine.

<https://blog.granted.com/>