As Vice President of Human Resources, Rodgers will head all aspects of human resources. He is charged with instilling a "common culture throughout the organization," according to the press release. "We're very pleased to have Walt on-board, with his deep experience in operations and managing the human side of a successful business," said CEO of RelaDyne, Larry Stoddard. "He will play a key role in the integration of the four organizations during the coming months and lead the efforts to cultivate our workforce and provide our current and future employees with the best training possible to differentiate ourselves in the industry." Rodgers' previous experience is highlighted by the 27 years he spent at Ferguson Enterprises, Inc., a nationwide plumbing supply distributor. His most recent position at Ferguson was Manager of Talent Development.
