MCKINSEY SURVEY SAYS EMPLOYERS NOT HAPPY WITH OBAMACARE

The picture which McKinsey & Co's latest health reform study painted was not liked by the Obama administration. The study found that once the bulk of the healthcare reform law's mandates take effect in 2014, 30% of the employers will "definitely" or "probably" stop offering their workers health insurance. The study found that the figure jumped to 50% among employers with "high awareness" to the reform law's requirement. McKinsey has released the details of the survey on its site.
