
WHITE HOUSE RELEASES LIST OF MEASURES TO CUT REDTAPE

President Obama's budget office has released a list of unwanted rules that will be deleted from the books, as a part of the move to save $10 billion over the next 5 years. This move is as a result of several complaints- that bureaucratic red tapes have been putting a crunch on job creation. More than 500 rules are suggested to be removed. The new move will promote telemedicine treatment in rural areas, electronic payment etc. which will significantly save huge amount of money.
