

FIRMS OFFER WORK-LIFE PROGRAMS BUT EMPLOYEES DON'T BELIEVE THEM

Many companies now offer a great work-life programs, but do they also penalize workers who use them? Many employees say "yes". Be excluded from consideration for career development functions and More than a quarter (28%) of executives / managers / supervisors interviewed in the United States, United Kingdom In addition: 54% of executives / managers / supervisors said that the ideal employee is available to meet the needs of the business, regardless of hours of work 25% said men who are very involved in their lives / personal family may not be very committed to their work. Read the original article here: How managers may be sabotaging work-life programs

<https://blog.granted.com/>