

---

NLRB CRITIZED BY CONGRESS AGAIN

The controversy over the future actions of the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) has intensified on 22 September when a congressional committee assumed the presidency of the expert group called the agency "assault on American workers and creators jobs. " In addition to the decision of the NLRB in August and the controversy over the Boeing plant, the Council is under fire from a new rule requires employers to display a new poster on the rights of workers and an effort to shorten the time between the filing of a union of an election petition and election.
Read the original article here: House Panel Assails NLRB's Recent 'Union Favoritism'

<https://blog.granted.com/>