

JENNIFER PRISTERA NEW VICE PRESIDENT OF HUMAN RESOURCE

Garden City Group, Inc., known for being a leader when it comes to bankruptcy administrations and class action settlement, has recently made an exciting announcement. The company has chosen Jennifer Pristera to serve as the vice president of human resource for the company. Pristera was the perfect candidate for the position, having just about 20 years of experience when it comes to dealing with human resources. She has worked on leadership development, employee relations, and has developed organization in her past positions. Now that Pristera has been named vice president of human resources, she will be leading human resources for the company. The chief executive officer of the company, David Isaac, has said that GCG is very dedicated to growing and expanding, especially when it comes to having an organized workplace that is diverse and full of culture. He believes that having Jennifer serve as the vice president of human resource for the company is a fantastic decision, especially because she is dedicated to committing time and effort into working in the human resources department and helping out the employees that work for the company. He says that Pristera has an exceptional track record and has accomplished many things in her twenty years of working with different aspects of human resources. She is a strong and dedicated professional who will only help to make the company even better than it already is. Before becoming the vice president of human resources for GCG, Pristera actually worked at the Wyndham Worldwide, taking on all types of positions, which included being vice president of human resources for that company. While working that position, she took on all types of human resources tasks, which included leadership development, helping employees engage with one another and with their leaders in an efficient manner, social responsibility, and much more. Before taking on these responsibilities, Pristera took on different human resources positions for various companies, including Citibank and CA Technologies. Pristera is a graduate of the Adelphi University, having earned a B.S. in management and communications. She has also received a certification from the Society for Human Resources Management, which states that she is, in fact, a Professional in Human Resources. When asked about her new position at GCG, Pristera says she is very excited. She says that she is looking forward to working with such a talented team of professionals while helping them to have success in the future by creating different types of strategies that will truly work for the best interest of the company. The GCG Company is widely recognized for the legal services it provides, especially when it comes to class action settlements and bankruptcy cases. There are over 1,000 employees working for the company in different offices around the country. The company has been featured in the New York Law Journal and has worked on many high-profile cases.

<https://blog.granted.com/>