

PICKING UP THE PIECES AFTER BEING FIRED

For many people, the idea of being fired is so terrible it is beyond their ability to even contemplate the possibility. Yet, statistics show that being fired (forced to leave a job) is very common. Even as you read this, thousands of people across America are finding a' 'pink slip'' in their pay envelope or are being told verbally not to return the next day. Whether the person is being let go because of a discipline process or because the company is not doing well (being laid off), the effect is essentially the same. The individual feels cheated, angry, humiliated, possibly desperate. The bottom line is that he or she is suddenly unemployed. Read More at EmploymentCrossing Looking for all available jobs?
