SEATTLE TECH COMPANY CUTTING 40 JOBS

Seattle's Isilon will reduce its workforce by 10%, or about 40 employees. The manufacturer of data storage systems had 394 employees worldwide, including 157 in sales and marketing and 137 in research and development. Isilon Systems is a global company that designs and sells clustered storage systems and software for digital content and other unstructured data, which includes video, audio, digital images, computer models, PDF files, scanned information, and test & simulation data.
