DIMENSION DATA CUTS 70 NORTH AMERICAN JOBS

Dimension Data, also called Didata, has cut 70 jobs in North America, or 9% of its workforce; and as many as 50 workers, or 4%, in Asia. The firm may make further cuts. Founded in 1983, Dimension Data is a specialist information technology services and solution provider, that helps clients plan, build, support and manage their IT infrastructures. Didata is Africa's largest provider of computer services. Their South African global headquarters has a cricket Oval and is surrounded by a nine-hole golf course.
