
LOS ALTOS SCHOOL DISTRICT SAVES 11 TEACHING JOBS

Eleven of the 23 Los Altos, California School District teachers who got pink slips in March will not lose their jobs, in a last-minute reprieve. Retirements, and a rise in kindergarten enrollment allowed the district to rehire or cancel layoff notices for the 11 teachers. The jobs of the other 12 teachers end today, although eight may be able to get their jobs back in the future. The district gave layoffs notices to 84 classified staff in April, but their fates are undecided. The Los Altos School District serves the elementary and intermediate educational needs for Los Altos, California. The local high school, Los Altos High School, is not part of the Los Altos School District.
