
ALABAMA LAW APPROVES INCENTIVES FOR GREEN JOBS

A new Alabama law allows the state to offer the same kinds of incentives to green tech and R&D firms, as it does to manufacturers. The state is attempting to lure employers who could create 7,000 jobs. Some new jobs should arrive in about a year. The legislation, signed by Republican Governor Bob Riley, which was sponsored by Montgomery Democratic State Representative John Knight and Selma Democratic State Senator Hank Sanders.
