
BORSHEIM'S LAYS OFF 5% OF WORKFORCE

Luxury jewelry retailer Borsheim's has laid off 13 people, or %5 of its workforce. It now has 267 employees. These are the first layoffs in the firm's 139-year history. Borsheim's Fine Jewelry is a jewelry store in Omaha, Nebraska. The store was founded in 1870, and has grown to become one of the largest independent jewelry stores in the nation. The store has been a subsidiary of Berkshire Hathaway since 1989. Borsheim's single 62,500 square-foot store anchors the upscale Regency Court mall in Omaha. It plays a starring role in Berkshire's annual shareholders meeting, hosting an enormous party each year.
