

MAKING CONNECTIONS TO LAND A JOB

In a Woodland, California library job-coaching course, Constance Stevens and Andrea Weiss taught participants skills to use in searching for a job. The two experts feel that networking is the most important thing to learn. Researching the most relevant companies will help applicants to answer interview questions. Topics covered include aspects of networking, industry events, informational interviews, “elevator speeches” and follow-up work. Read the original article here: To land a job, make the right connections - Daily Democrat

<https://blog.granted.com/>