

---

JOBLESS CLAIMS STILL TOO HIGH TO ALLEVIATE CONCERNS ABOUT SLUGGISH ECONOMY

While there has been a slight dip in jobless claims, the economy is not recovering as well as previously predicted. Some analysts blame high gasoline and food prices as contributing factors in the slow-down of job growth. The one positive sign is that since productivity has slowed, new hiring is expected by businesses to keep up with demand.

Read the full article here:

High jobless claims add to slowdown concerns

<https://blog.granted.com/>