

POVERTY HITS THE SUBURBS

Survey reveals that there is rise in number of residents living below the poverty line which is as much as one third of the America's total population. Major poverty issues are in suburbs rather than inner cities or rural areas. Due to weak economy these numbers are still getting worst. This group also includes immigrants, minimum waged workers and many more. Overall effect of disappearing jobs, lower wages and continued weak economy are causing more and more people to live below the poverty line.
