CV SURGEON UPDATES THEIR CV WRITING SERVICE - PR WEB (PRESS RELEASE)

CV Surgeon, the CV and career expert, has made some updates to a section of their website designed to help candidates perfect their CV writing technique. But due to growing demand from their customers, the team have incorporated more interactive content within the CV writing section of the website. With thousands of candidates all over the country looking for career advice and expert tips, one of the biggest enquiries the CV Surgeon team receive is how to write a CV. From how to gather content for a job application to creating a compelling personal statement and career objective. Craig Stovold, Director, commented, "We receive hundreds of queries every week from candidates all over the country about how to write a CV. Candidates can freely browse our site for this information but we wanted to improve our offering and deliver something more interactive and compelling. We have found that a lot of users don't have much time before a job interview to look for advice and we wanted to solve this problem by offering something fast and easy to access. We feel our video offering does just this. Our online video channel means a user can find advice and watch it at the click of a button." The CV writing articles compliment other sections of the website including the job interviews and career progression sections. Each of these sections is full of advice for candidates to read – from how to impress employers during a job interview to how to keep them impressed once working for them.
