

HOLIDAYS - THE BEST TIME TO DEVELOP JOB CONTACTS

Despite of the general contrary belief, as it turns out, holidays of November and December are good times for developing good contacts for a job search. According to the theory of leading career coach Ford R. Myers, 'getting the job when no one is hiring,' it is important for the job-seekers to be active in these months because there will be little to no competition in the field due to the misconception. Sending holiday cards to hiring managers and human resource department, calling people on work while others are on holidays, etc., will help you in your job search.
