The Conventional Ways

Legal jobs can be got through legal newspapers and jobs posting boards but the problem with these sources is that a lot of in house employers receive well over a thousand responses to their ads everyday.

The other way in which an attorney can get in house placement is through legal recruiting firms. Legal job opportunities are increasing with time and legal recruiting firms are keeping up with the times. Cold calling is one way in which recruiters persuade General Counsels to fill in an opening.

This is achieved by virtue of some meeting which the recruiter attends with the General Counsels. Then it is the job of the General Counsel to talk to other search firms and negotiate fees with them. Then a final search firm is selected. These search firms are responsible for selecting firms with in house legal employment.

Like individual employers when a legal placement office also gives an ad for an in house position, then they are most likely to get thousands of enquiries everyday. It is difficult to sort out only a few resumes from those enquiries but the placement firm is adept at this task.

Hence to be in the list of top ten selected candidates, you need to be able to file your resume in the most unique way possible. Out of the top ten, a legal job placement is then made.
