

BEEFING UP YOUR JOB SEARCH EFFORTS

Ty If you've got it, flaunt it! It seems that Obama has created yet another reason for his popularity to soar. Recent photos of the shirtless President-elect have been popping up all over the Net, and the consensus is that his body is spectacular. Despite the fact that there is an obvious media frenzy surrounding the new President-elect, he still had no problem strutting his stuff at the beach while on vacation in his home state.

It is reported that Obama did not neglect his exercise routine either. Slacking, even when relaxation seems in order, can mean falling behind the curve. Obama obviously didn't want to trade his washboard abs in for a spare tire. We, like Obama, have to remain on top of our game.

In order to get what you want you've got to keep working and never let yourself get complacent. This applies to everything in life, including your career. When it seems like relaxation is in order because you have complete security in your job, it's often wise to keep an eye on other opportunities. This advice is especially pertinent in a bad economy such as this one. So let EmploymentCrossing help you sweat out all of the opportunities out there. Who knows, maybe the perfect job really does exist. So flex your jobseeking muscles and take advantage of our free trial offer now to find out for yourself.