

NEAPCO PLANT CUTS 33 WORKERS

Nearly three dozen people in Beatrice, Nebraska are looking for new jobs this week after layoffs at a vehicle drive train manufacturer. The Neapco plant eliminated 33 jobs last week, and plant manager Duane Culver blamed the "soft business environment." Before the cuts, Neapco had about 170 employees at its Beatrice plant, which has been operating for 28 years. Neapco is based in Pottstown, Pennsylvania. The company also has operations in California, and in Mexico and Canada. Culver says Neapco is working with local agencies to help the laid-off workers find new jobs.
