

SPANSION TO DELETE 3,000 JOBS

Flash memory manufacturer Spansion will cut its global work force by 35%, or about 3,000 jobs. Sunnyvale, California-based Spansion said the cuts will take place mainly at manufacturing sites. Spansion expects to save about $225 million yearly after the job cuts, but incur charges of $25 million during the first half of this year. In January, Spansion said it was looking at strategic alternatives that could include selling itself or merging with a similar company.
