

U.S. CONSUMER CONFIDENCE FELL ON JOB OUTLOOK

U.S. consumer confidence fell in the second quarter of 2012 on concern for the economy and job security, according to a survey by Nielsen Holdings NV. (NLSN) Nielsen, a global information and measurement company, said its index of U.S. consumer confidence fell five points in the period to 87. Its lowest point on record was 80 points in the first half of 2009. The company surveyed 500 people in the U.S. online from May 4 to May 21.
