

BECOME AN ADVERTISING PROFESSIONAL TODAY

Studying advertising in college will prepare you for a rewarding career within the industry. But, simply earning a degree and knowing the coursework does not get you a job. You still need to perform a solid job search and learn about the companies where you are applying. One excellent way to accomplish this is at AdvertisingCrossing. In the middle of the homepage, there is a section for featured advertising employers. Here, you will find various employers from across the country featured every couple of days. Along with information from the employers you will also find a featured job available at the company. Some of the recently featured employers include Facebook, CBS and the Celgene Corporation. The jobs at these companies include working in the promotions department, summer internships, advertising sales executives and design program managers. Advertising is a very rewarding industry, especially if you can grab a job right out of school doing what you love. One way to put yourself in a strong position for a job is to work an internship prior to graduation. You can find available internships at some of the best companies in the country using the job board at AdvertisingCrossing. The more often you visit the site, the more often you will find new jobs posted to the site. Want to see which Advertising Sales jobs are available near you? Click here to see.
