

HUNGER STRIKERS IN PROTEST OF SCHOOL AIDE LAYOFFS

The budget-strapped Philadelphia School District's decision to layoff 1,202 noontime aides has prompted a hunger strike protest by two parents and two school district employees. The hunger strike is happening outside the governor's office in Philadelphia. The protestors plan to drink only water until funds are available to rehire the aides. A union representing the noontime aides said the elimination of their jobs places students in danger. The school district faces a $304 budget shortfall that would need to be corrected by the end of June for the aides to be rehired for next school year. For more details on the article Click Here Where can you find the most Education jobs? Click here.

<https://blog.granted.com/>