

JOBS IN EDUCATION - TOP 10 HIGH PAYING JOBS IN EDUCATION

School principals

You would be responsible for running a school and involved in monitoring curriculum and creating an environment for improvement of the students. As a principal you will have to bring in loads of experience working as a teacher. According the statistics of the Labor Bureau, school principals enjoyed a high pay.

Teacher in special education

Jobs in education also have openings for special education teachers as well. This is also among the most opted for careers in education. You will have to prepare individualized education plans and the job pays very good salary.

Chief academic officer

Jobs in education as well as government jobs in education include the post of a chief academic officer. You will be responsible for monitoring all higher education courses and resolving differences between the staff members and also between the various academic departments.

Assistant professor

Teaching college can be a paying profession and the money also depends on the pay standards of the federal state you are in. You would have to hold a doctorate degree in your field and keep on publishing articles and papers on your subject on a regular basis.

Professor

This is a senior position at an university and the pay is usually very high and could also go up depending the type of university you work for. When people look for jobs in higher education, they usually apply for the job of a professor well versed in a subject with published work to his or her credit. You could have research students pursuing their thesis under you and you should aggressively head the research department as well.

Tutoring

You can teach online and these jobs in education usually do not require you to work outside home. You can work from home and detach various subjects to school students or even tailor lessons for college undergrads and graduate students who are pursuing their career in a particular subject.

Coordinator

This is among the most sought jobs in schools and works well for many aspirants for a career in education.

Counselor

Counseling students require some skill as many of them are not sure about the subject they want to take as electives. You are supposed to guide them after assessing their abilities and their individual passion for subjects.

Post secondary teachers

There are post secondary teachers coast to coast who earn a median income of more than $80,000 per annum. Creating assignments and tests and designing syllabi would be your job as a post secondary teacher.

School psychologist

You have to assess any latent or overt behavioral problems among students and refer them to psychologists in consultation with the students and the parents. This is very high paying position among the jobs in education.

<https://blog.granted.com/>