

ME LLAMO "SPECIAL AGENT"

Are you fluent in a foreign language? Good with numbers and accounting? Know your way around JavaScript et al.? Intelligent about intelligence? Then you may very well end up on the FBI's newest Most Wanted List. Before you take out your suitcase and buy that ticket to Cabo, we mean that the FBI wants you to WORK for them (whew!). The Federal Bureau of Investigation is planning its largest hiring blitz in a century, with plans to fill 2,100 professional staff vacancies and 850 special agent vacancies. The hirings would replace departed staff and add some employees. Obviously, not all FBI jobs are glamorous, dangerous, high-profile, or require a makeover à la Sandra Bullock in "Miss Congeniality." However, to work for the FBI is to "protect our nation from terrorists, spies, and others who would wish us harm," according to FBI Assistant Director John Raucci of the Human Resources division. Also, finance-savvy accountant types are needed to investigate corporate wrongdoing in connection with the current financial crisis. Interested yet? Check out some of the FBI Jobs right here on EmploymentCrossing; If you think you've got the chops to make it (no, J. Edgar Hoover fans, crossdressing is NOT one of the qualifications)... sign up for EmploymentCrossing and apply before someone else does. To get you going, we also have a free trial. If the FBI is not your thing, but you're still interested in the other fields we've mentioned, try AccountingCrossing or CPlusPlusCrossing.

<https://blog.granted.com/>